

Photo blog from the Ouse Washes nature reserve, and surrounding grassland.
April and early May 2009.

A Simmental steer, enjoying the evening sunshine; owned by John Fletcher.

Groups of Simmental steers and heifers; owned by John Fletcher, grazing the RSPB new habitat creation known as the Pilot Project

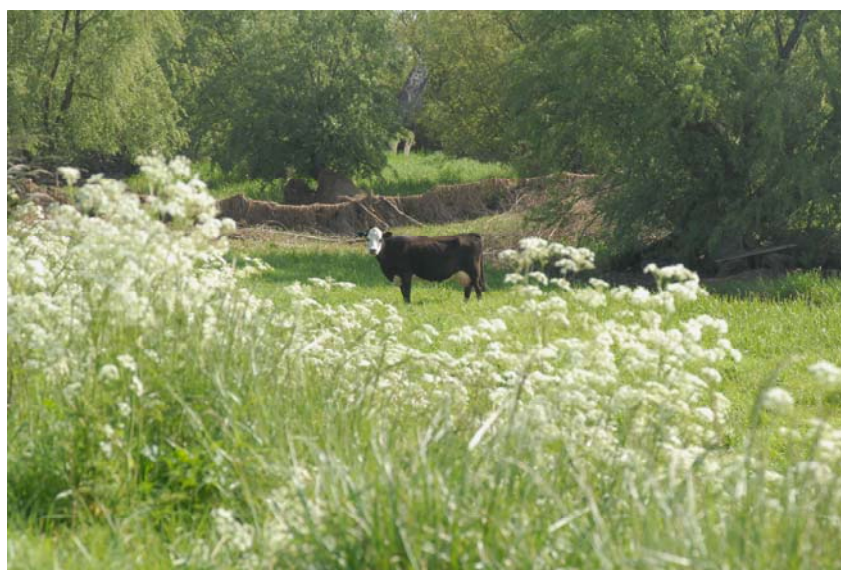

A lapwing with one of her chicks (just visible, 1 meter to her right) benefiting from the RSPB Pilot Project

Simmental young stock, enjoying the lush early grass of the Ouse Washes; owned by Rob Fletcher

Limousine Cows and calves grazing one of the many riverbanks associated with The Ouse Washes; owned by Roger Turner.

One cow from the above group, framed by nature!

Simmental heifers and bull grazing one of the many riverbanks associated with The Ouse Washes; owned by Rob Fletcher.

A John Fletcher owned steer, lush wet grassland, open water, two lapwings and one redshank, farming and nature in harmony.

Yellow wagtails (male and female) recently returned from Africa, sitting on the fence of recently created nature habitat, on John Fletcher's farm.